CHAMBER HANDS OUT ANNUAL COMMUNITY AWARDS

Each year the Grant County Chamber of Commerce accepts nominations from across the county for their annual community awards giving all Grant County citizens a chance to be recognized as Grant Countian of the Year, Volunteer of the Year, Excellence in Education and Excellence in Business, as well as a community service award, which is given periodically to individuals, organizations and businesses who go above and beyond. This year's recipients were honored on Saturday, April 27 at Williamstown High School as they were presented plaques. The Grant County News will publish articles featuring each winner in upcoming issues. This year's winners include:

Diana Morgan - Volunteer of the Year

Morgan, of Dry Ridge is a two-time recipient of this award, having received one in 2002.

She was nominated by Bev Hearn, her supervisor at St. Elizabeth Healthcare, Grant County.

"Diana is just not a co-worker to those she works with, she is their friend. Diana is a 'God-sent angel,' Hearn said

Donna Jones - Educator of the Year

Jones of Williamstown is a first grade teacher at Williamstown Elementary. She'll be retiring at the end of school this year. She was nominated by Sally Skinner, superintendent.

"For 31 years, Mrs. Jones has positively impacted the many students and families she has served," Skinner said.

Justin Baker - Excellence in Business

Baker and his wife, Amanda, opened Body Works Gym in Dry Ridge in 2006. He moved the facility to a larger location earlier this year. He was nominated by Bill Dinnison, a client.

"Justin is fond of saying, 'We change peoples lives.' Going to Body Works is like going to Cheers, everybody is your friend." Dinnison said.

Darrell Link - Grant Countian of the Year

Link served on the fiscal court since 1993 and was elected county judge-executive in 1998. He was nominated by Peggy Udpick, county treasurer.

"One only needs to look around at the changes in Grant County in the past 12 years to appreciate the changes that Judge Link has implemented," Udpick said.

Bank of Kentucky - Community Service award

The Bank of Kentucky made a $6 million endowment to Northern Kentucky University, as well as sponsored various educational programs in the community.

Employees from the Dry Ridge locations also volunteer on many community service projects. This year, they have volunteered to work in Grant County's community garden.

Williamstown earns U.S. News ranking

By Bryan Marshall
Staff Writer

Williamstown High School is moving up the rankings.

Last year, the school was recognized as the 18th best high school in the state by a national publication.

U.S. News now has WHS as the 11th best high school in Kentucky in their 2013 rankings.

"Only 20 high schools in Kentucky received national ranking," said Williamstown Independent Superintendent Sally Skinner.

Career advancement center to open in Dry Ridge

By Bryan Marshall
Staff Writer

Seventeen percent of Grant County residents live below the poverty level, roughly 7 percent higher than the average rate for Boone, Campbell and Kenton County.

DID YOU KNOW?

- The new career advancement center will bring adult ed., Brighton Center, Gateway Community College and head start/preschool under one roof.

Only 72 percent of Grant County residents are high school graduates, which is lower than the state average of 74 percent and much lower than rates in Boone (85 percent), Campbell (81 percent) and Kenton (82 percent) counties.

A solution to fixing these alarming statistics may be on the way.

Education and employment services will soon be housed under one roof at

Raymond Spillman

With walking stick in hand, Raymond Spillman, the 2013 starter for the Derby Dash 5K race; strides through his memories as he strengthens his body at the Williamstown Cemetery. But, Spillman has not always walked his way to health.

Since retiring from full-time farming as well as full-time tractor repairman, Spillman spent a lot of time just sitting on his couch.

Last April as he sat on that couch with a self-described "pretty good sized tummy" and health issues. Norma, his wife of 49 years, asked him what he was going to do about it. "I'm going to join Biggest Winner and I'm gonna lose me some weight," he said. And join he did.

VIEWPOINT

OTHER VIEWS

Toyota plant’s expansion good for region

At a time when the economy still feels shaky, it’s reassuring to see signs that Kentucky’s auto industry is more solid than ever.

Toyota’s announcement last week that it will begin making Lexus sedans for the first time in this country in Kentucky in 2015 is big news.

Toyota’s $531 million investment (offset by a promised $146.5 million in state tax incentives) will create 750 new jobs at the Georgetown plant, bringing total employment to 6,739.

Because the expansion will require a new assembly line, the spin-off benefits for auto parts makers in Kentucky could be substantial.

Gov. Steve Beshear, who met with top Toyota officials late last year in Japan, said economic development legislation enacted in a 2012 special session to help Ford expand in Louisville also helped seal the Toyota deal.

While it makes sense for the Japanese automaker to build its vehicles closer to where they’re going to be marketed, the decision to expand at Georgetown also is a vote of confidence in Toyota’s Kentucky work force.

And it’s not the first. Toyota announced plans last year to increase engine production at the Georgetown plant.

Toyota and its workers have weathered some ups and downs in the last few years, some of them self-inflicted. It’s good to see the rebounding company’s partnership with Kentucky remains strong.

PERSONALLY SPEAKING

Getting ready for the last curtain call!

As I begin my Year of the Big Exit, the Road to Retirement, the Next to Last Good-bye, the Happy Liberal Farewell Tour, or otherwise better known as You Ain’t Got Me to Kick Around Anymore Blues Fest, it makes me sad to say not all my good ideas have been made real; this being a lack of action by past officials.

Granted, there is still almost kind of nearly a year left for results, but my ideas have, for the most part, been too big for a short-term action plan.

It was my plan to have built a 200-foot tall lava lamp that would be placed among the man-made and landscaped hills of the landfill. The lamp would be heated by the burning of the methane gas created by the landfill waste.

A parking style field, similar to the old outdoor theater concept, would allow for a serene and contemplative atmosphere for residents and my projection of three million tourists a year.

On top of all the streetlight poles that lined Williamstown’s Main Street, lava lamps would bubble up their cash drawing influence on tourists. Williamstown and Grant County would boom with new life.

But, it didn’t get done over the

I was told that it would be too costly to move an aircraft carrier to Grant County even if it was sailed up the Mississippi and Ohio River. So, I agreed that a battleship would work but just not as well.

I even had the contact for purchasing aircraft carriers and battleships, American, Russian and from other countries.

Indeed, my hotel plan was aggressive and hugely visionary, but so were the St. Lewis Arch, the Golden Gate Bridge, Mt. Rushmore, Williamstown’s Gazebo and other such now iconic landmarks!

I wanted to dam up a few hundred small Grant County valleys and hollows and have them fill up with water. My goal was for local people to have tilapia and freshwater shrimp farming. Some of the bigger pools of water would become home for cabins and overnight and weekly camping for money laden tourists.

But let us skip the 48 other great ideas and move directly into my newest, most doable and cost-negotiable idea. This is an idea that will flood Grant County with tourist money and international attention.

With the power of the present tourism dollars funding a highly community print marketing campaign, local entrepreneurs would coordinate a construction program of miniature churches.

There are miniature churches around the world and as close to us as the Thomas Moore College campus. Some of these structures are large enough for 10 people and some only large enough for one person to be inside.

The secret of success is that there would be a wide variety of miniatures from fieldstone, brick and concrete to wood, logs and plain to fancy, non-denomination to all the denominations of all the people who construct them.

Go online and search for: miniature church images.

Along with these newly constructed miniature churches the owners could also place a farmers market or sell crafts, art, antiques.

Tourist would pick up maps for the complete miniature church tour with details on seeing all the structures or how to drive a loop to view a portion in less time. The maps would also indicate what sites had crafts, produce, antiques and homemade pies, jam and bread.

The beauty of this idea is that the ownership is in the hands of the citizens and not paid for by taxes. There is a lot more to this idea than these brief words and I am available to coordinate it all... especially after this, the year my canoe goes over the big falls.

GUEST COLUMN

No other book is more important than the bible

As my wife and I begin to expand the program for alcohol and drug abuse, I am amazed at the number of people that say they are God-fearing people and don’t have a clue as to who God is. On any given day, I can ask people from church what they are reading in their Bible and they will say they never had the chance to read it this morning. They were too busy getting ready for work.

I read an article in the paper recently and about a dozen people were asked the question, “What is your favorite book?” No one mentioned the Bible. The one book that is more important than any other book in the world and it isn’t even an afterthought for most people. Can you begin to understand my frustration?

When I ask someone why they don’t read the Bible they often tell me that they are praying more. That isn’t an answer to the question. Praying is where you spend time talking to God telling Him what your desires are. Reading the Bible is listening to God tell you what he expects from you, before He can meet your needs and desires.

I love my wife with all my heart. She is the love of my life and a wonderful gift from God. The thing that makes our marriage so strong is that we spend many hours a week in the Word of God and we spend many hours a week communicating with each other. What kind of a relationship do you think we would have if I did all the talking and expected her to be silent and just listen? There isn’t a relationship. I really don’t know what that would be, other than selfish and self-centered.

God loves us so much that He gave His only Son to be our savior. He created us to have someone to hang out with. He wants to give us a prosperous life full of hope. But the only way we are ever going to understand him is if we read the love letter He has written us. That’s what the Bible is. I am sitting here watching 16-year-old baby girls and guys dying from heroin addiction because they have no hope.

Our society tells them it is a disease and it isn’t their fault. That is a lie. It is their fault. They are making terrible (sinful) choices trying to fill a void in their heart only God can fill. The only real hope they have is Jesus Christ. You have tried everything else and it doesn’t satisfy you. Come back to God.

DOWN AND DIRTY

Don't rush the summer vegetable garden

I am heading to Boulder, Colorado for a Slow Money National Gathering Conference and at writing they are melting a record April snowfall; a warming trend occurs before my arrival, thank goodness. The cold spring met with a blizzard in my destination that is the one opportunity I have to get away for some continuing education this year does not sit well.

While there is much to be done in the spring garden and the surrounding landscape, the cool season has helped to slow the sometimes-frenetic pace. I am so not ready to get any summer vegetables in because it is simply too cold yet. Plus, we must consider the soil temperature, summer crops will not germinate by seed nor will there roots thrive in cold soils. Hold off on the tomatoes a bit longer if you do not want them to languish.

Two things that can set you back in the vegetable garden from the start: poorly prepared soil and seedlings set out too early. Soil temperature has a great deal to do with how well your crops germinate, establish and produce.

Since we don't live in the soil (for some of us I suppose this could be debated) we are not as tuned in to the importance of soil temperature; sure, we know ambient air temperature and once it is above 65 degrees something in our brains is triggered and we want to start our vegetable garden straight away...be patient for some crops.

Cool season crops are out: potatoes, onions, leeks and some greens. But it is still too early for tomatoes, cucumbers, beans, squash and other summer crops. Certain seeds simply will not germinate until soil temperatures reach 70, 80 or 90 degrees.

Since tomatoes are likely the most popular summer vegetable (and the one that typically gets planted too early in some gardens) this example may be useful. Tomatoes are picky about soil and ambient air temperature. Research conducted by the USDA-Agricultural Research Station in Urbana, Illinois revealed some interesting facts. Anything below 55 degrees screws up the circadian clock of the plant.

Keep your plants warm

Once the circadian clock is discombobulated the tomato's ability to photosynthesize during the day and process the starch into sugar at night is delayed within the regular 24-hour cycle of the day. The photosynthetic metabolism of a plant that has been subjected to nighttime temperatures below 50 degrees starts to photosynthesize later in the day and the processing of the starch starts later in the night and the whole cycle gets displaced to the point that the plant languishes.

One sign of cold stress for a tomato plant is purple-tinged leaves, I have had plants with purple tinged-leaves...they look robust and healthy but they never produced much. It seems, too, that temperatures below 55 degrees also renders the pollen of a tomato flower useless (high heat will do this, too)...no fertilization of the flower, no tomato.

The reality is that gardeners are excited to get gardening in the spring so how do we effectively get everything we want and early start, healthy plants and a good harvest. There are ways to plant early and ensure that you keep your plants warm. Heat the soil, first, by putting down black plastic. Use a cleverly constructed cold frame system out of some household items. You can create your own "wall-of-water" heating device by filling gallon jugs with water and lashing them together in a circle around your plants (or you can buy the pre-made plastic "wall-of-water" device). The water will heat during the day and release the warmth overnight, keeping your tomato plant warm.

God will lead you through the valleys

Have you ever been in a valley? I'm not talking about a physical valley like Fresno, California. I've been there. It's hot. It's dry. No, I'm talking about an emotional valley. A spiritual valley, a health valley. Have you ever been in one of those valleys? Chances are you have. The reality is that we will all face valleys of different sorts throughout our lives. The question is not if, but when.

I've had my share of valleys. The deepest, darkest valley involved the loss of my first wife. Talk about the valley of the shadow of death! What a horrible valley it was. Loneliness, sorrow, loneliness, despair, loneliness...did I mention the loneliness? But in the midst of that valley God taught me some very important things about valleys. The things I learned in that valley have given me strength in subsequent valleys.

One of the things that God taught me through that valley was that the valley is not our permanent home. In Psalm 23, David talks about "walking through" a deep, dark valley. He doesn't mention hanging out there. He doesn't talk about setting up camp in that valley.

Unfortunately, too often we get into our valleys and start to think that God has abandoned us. We declare that God has forgotten about us. We decide to wallow in our misfortune and have ourselves a nice little pity party. I'll be honest, I struggled with this in my valley. But God reminded me through the 23rd Psalm that the valley is always temporary. As I looked at all of the heroes of the Bible, I saw many valleys, but God always led them through the valley. It was always temporary!

Even if a health valley ends in physical death, for followers of Jesus, it's not the end! That valley ends at physical death and eternal life with Him begins! No more valleys! Ever!

Remember, valleys are always temporary.

The other thing that God taught me in that horrific valley was that I was never alone. Again, David says in that famous psalm that even in the valley he would "fear no evil, for You are with me." This is a promise that God has made to His people throughout the Bible. He has said over and over again, "I will never leave you or forsake you." It was in my valley that I was reminded of His presence. And He will be there for you in your valley. Just call to Him!

Remember, your valley is not permanent. And you don't have to be alone. Bring on the valleys!

GCMS Family Fun and Fitness

The Grant County Middle School students and staff, parents and community members recently had a family fun and fitness night at the GCMS gym.

The guest speaker, Justin Baker, owner of Body Works Gym, encouraged all the guests to "believe in themselves" in order to enjoy a better quality of life, which includes eating nutritional foods and exercising.

"Our mission is to provide health and fitness information to our students, staff, and community," Christy Roberts, director of Family Fun and Fitness Night and practical living, health and physical education teacher at Grant County Middle School, said.

Students presented speeches about the importance of fitness. The program included a fitness routine performed by students in Roberts' physical education classes, various exercise routines by several students and workout demonstrations by the Body Works instructors.

"Family Fun and Fitness was a great night! We learned so much about the importance of fitness and health. And it can be done in a fun way!" eighth grader Heather Beach said.

Members of the community and students at Grant County Middle School were on the floor exercising as part of GCMS Family Fun and Fitness Night.

MEET THE TEAM 2013

2013 Grant County High School Tennis Team

Coach chat with Elizabeth Dalzell

Coach: Elizabeth Dalzell, GCHS tennis

Occupation: guidance counselor at Grant County Middle School

Previous coaching experience: New coach; husband is football coach at GCMS and played tennis in high school so he helps me from the sidelines.

Thoughts on coaching: I was a little apprehensive due to time constraint, but I have absolutely loved it. It has been very enjoyable.

What do you expect from your players: None of these girls have played before. I expect them to work hard because everyone can get better. I also want them to enjoy being on a team and the game of tennis.

Outlook for the upcoming season: Fairly well. We've had two match wins and one split.

What are some of the team's strengths: Motivation and enthusiasm. These girls are excited about playing on a varsity level. Tennis hasn't really caught on in our area. You see basketball courts in people's driveways but you don't see many tennis courts.

What areas do you want to improve upon: Serving, returning good serves and net play.

What are your goals for the season: I had it set too low. I was just hoping to instill interest in the program, especially with no returning players so I expected more of a learning curve, but these girls have done well.

Who are the teams to beat this season: Walton-Verona and Gal-

"None of these girls have played before. I expect them to work hard because everyone can get better."

Coach
Elizabeth Dalzell

latin County are really good. We're pretty evenly matched with Williamstown.

Issues or concerns for the team: The only place we have to play is at Piddle Park in Dry Ridge or Webb Park in Williamstown. The conditions of the court in Piddle Park are not good. One net has a hole in it and is kept in place by a piece of clothesline and wire. We are in fundraising mode to pay for our uniforms and to pay to re-surface the tennis court and get new nets. I plan to write a grant application to help us with these funds.

How has the weather impacted your season: We couldn't get on the courts and at GCHS we've got more varsity sports programs than gym space so it has been difficult. Many practices have been when it is 35 degrees and windy so the weather has definitely been a factor this year.

Summer plans: I've got plans for summer to have summer camps for younger kids who might be interested. I'd also like our varsity players to mentor some younger players. My expectations will be higher for this team next year so we will plan to go to regionals because they'll deserve to go.

GCMS soccer team kicks way to Owen win

By Jamie Baker-Nantz
Editor

The Grant County Middle Soccer team won the Owen County Classic on April 20. “I was very happy that we won,” said Coach Garrett Griffith. “One of our main goals at the beginning of the season was to win the tournament.” The GCMS soccer team has 25 players. At the Owen County Classic, they competed against Grant County, Carroll County and Owen County. The GCMS Braves beat Carroll 5 -1 and Owen 6 - 0. “Overall it was team effort,” Griffith said. “Matthew Barnett was a key player as he is our last defender and controls our defense, so to only allow one goal in two games show how great we played as a team and how strong Matthew is as a leader.” Griffith said Bo Cobb and True Williams were important in the win because of their ability on ball possessions and supplying the ball to the midfielders and forwards. Four GCMS players, Ethan Howe, Jose Barajas, Stuart Smith and Nathan Yeager, were selected to the All-Tournament Team for their performance in the tournament. Griffith said his team is experienced and that is their strength. “Last year we won 11 games and returned the majority of players from that team,” Griffith said. “We possess the ball well, play good defense and we have players who are very good at being in the right places to score goals.” The team is focusing on bettering their first ball touches to help with possession and making better supporting runs. “We have six games left in the season and our goal is win the remaining games and finish the year with 12 wins,” Griffith said.

GCHS's FORREST SCHMITT SIGNS WITH UNION COLLEGE

Athlete: Forrest Schmitt
Sports: soccer
Number of years playing this sport: 12
Position: forward
Parents: Lea and Dave Schmitt
School committed to: Union College
College coach name: Tyler Brock
Reason for selecting and signing with this school: “I felt a connection with the coach. He’s a really nice guy and he showed a genuine interest in me. We both have diabetes so he understands some of the struggles I’ve faced with it. After visiting the campus and practicing with the team, I liked the atmosphere and the overall feeling of the program. Union also awarded me a presidential scholarship based on academics, which will certainly help with the cost of college.

Highlights/accomplishments/awards from your high school years: Two-time Dry Ridge Toyota Invitational All-Tournament Team. Varsity co-captain junior and senior year; set record for the most goals (19) scored in a single season in my senior year. Also in my senior season - 32nd All-District Tournament team. All Northern Kentucky Team honorable mention.
What will you miss most about your playing time in high school?: “I’ll definitely miss my teammates. They have become some of my best friends over the years that we have played together.

er. I have hundreds of great memories from playing here and no matter what, we always had fun playing. I’m also going to miss my dad being my coach. He’s always been there on the sideline to help me when I’m playing bad and to celebrate with me when I’m playing good.”
What are your expectations playing at the collegiate level?: “All I want to do is go and help the team win, however I can.”

Future plans: I want to be an environmental lawyer like my dad. I plan on studying environmental sciences and/or biology at Union and then going on to get my law degree.
Coach comments: “We are very excited about Forrest joining our program. He brings in some good size up top and a great work rate. Forrest has a nice touch on the ball and can help the team build and grow the attack through the midfield,” Coach Tyler Brock.

Grant County High School hosted the Grant County Invitational Track Meet on April 26. Grant County High School Seniors Nick Braun and Jarred Baker, as well as Jeremy Dunn, center, the track team manager, were recognized at the start of the meet by GCHS Coach Chris Jefferson (above.)

Braun went on to place third in the 110m hurdles with a time of 16.80.

Williamstown had two athletes, Hannah Kinsey and Alex Prokopchak compete. Kinsey participated in the 800, while Prokopchak won the girls long jump event and placed second in the triple jump.

Braves face Pioneers, Carroll Co. this week

The Grant County High School Baseball team has found a rhythm and are on a seven-game winning streak.

"The players are finally getting timely hits, running the bases well and just doing the little things it takes to win. They are playing team baseball," said Coach Darrin Robinson.

Robinson credited several players including Jordan Martin, Ben Shipp, Jason Goe, Blake Dills and Lucas Alger for giving 100 percent working hard and playing consistently.

"Wyatt Glass has also been outstanding on the mound this year and has put his self in position to be the best pitcher in the 8th region," Robinson said.

The team continues to work on hitting in practice, as well as defense.

"We have to hit in order to give this team a chance," Robinson said.

The team has been hitting close to 10 hits per game.

"I'm pleased with this group. We have talent and it is starting to show. We have been given no publicity as far as rankings, but we prefer to keep it that way. The only recognition we want is at the end of the season when we make the region and make a run at state," Robinson said.

He said the cooler weather was a factor, which he attributes to the team's slow start.

"This has to be the craziest spring I have seen," Robinson said. "But it is finally starting to warm up so it's no longer a factor."

Williamstown runner ready for the Flying Pig

By Jamie Baker-Nantz
Editor

The one thing that Sarah Dills hated as a soccer player is the one thing that she's fallen head over heels for.

Despite the aching muscles, painful blisters and frigid ice baths that she's endured the past four months since she began training to run the 15th Annual Flying Pig Marathon on May 5 in Cincinnati, Dills knows the thrill of finishing the 26.2 mile marathon will be worth it.

"When I played soccer in high school and had to go out for conditioning and run a mile, it was brutal," she said, with a smile.

Dills moved to Grant County in 2003 after graduating from the University of Kentucky and for the first time she joined a gym.

But it wasn't until 2007 after she married Grant County Sheriff Chuck Dills and became a step-mother to his two sons that she took up running.

"When Brennan joined cross country it was something that he and I could do together and I really liked that. We'd go out and run maybe three miles," she said.

In 2008, Dills gave birth to a daughter and said she had trouble losing her baby weight.

"I just wasn't healthy, so on New Year's Day 2010, I decided I'd get into shape," she said.

Dills was working for Home Trends Magazine at the time and one of the team building exercises she participated in for staff was to set three personal goals for the coming year with the three steps to make it happen.

"I wrote down that I wanted to run a marathon," she said. "A few years later I found that list and decided that even though I didn't do it when I set out to, I could still do it," she said.

In June 2010, she began training in earnest and ran 13.1 miles in the Sun Burst Half Marathon at Notre Dame in Notre Dame, Ind.

She wanted to keep running but became pregnant with twins.

Following their birth in

Sarah Dills will be running the Flying Pig Marathon for the first time on May 5. She's been training since January. Photos submitted

'We have always run and we will always run'

Sarah Dills hasn't been running long.

She didn't even consider herself a runner until two weeks ago.

As she learned of the bombings at the Boston Marathon, she was sad, but resolved.

"Before then as people found out I was training to run the Flying Pig they'd say, 'you're a runner?' and I'd always so no," she said.

But watching those runner cross that finish line and knowing what'd they gone through to get there, I did feel a sense of unity," she said.

She shared her thoughts about the bombing on her blog, www.mylifewithoutmanicures.com/blog.

"All I've heard on the news is how attacks like this are meant to instill fear and terror in their subjects . . . Welll, this lunatic targeted the wrong group of people. We are runners! We have always run and we always will run," she wrote.

2011, she decided to begin training again.

In Jan. 2012, she suffered a sports hernia in her groin, which stopped her from running for two months. She began training again in August and rain in the Disney World Wine and Dine Half Marathon in Florida.

The race course was spread throughout the theme park and Disney characters cheered on participants.

She and her daughter, Bianca, entered the Kids Fun

Run, a 200-yard dash.

"We'd gone not far when she looks up at me and said, 'mommy I'm tired.' I said look Bianca there's Mickey at the finish line and it was like a burst of adrenaline because she took off and ran to him," Dills said.

When Dills crossed the finish line that day, she said she wanted to fall over.

"I even said I didn't know how people ran a full marathon," she said.

A few months later she had what she calls a "now or never" moment when she decided that she'd start training to run a full marathon.

"I just got it into my head that I could do this," she said. "I kept thinking I'm not getting any younger so I better do it."

She first contacted a group of local runners about how to begin preparing for the grueling event.

"They were so helpful and so supportive, but they're fast and I'm not," she said candidly.

She opted to join a group out of Newport that meets on Tuesday night and Saturday mornings, which offer coaches for runners of various paces.

"I was nervous that first day because it was kind of like the first day of school," she said. "You don't know anyone and will they like me is on your mind."

What Dills found were people willing to partner with her to keep her focused so that she would crawl out of warm bed on a freezing cold Saturday in January and run for five miles.

She said the longer she ran, the more she got to know her running partners and learned that they were there for each other.

"One Saturday in February they were forecasting a blizzard and telling people to stay home, but I knew my group would be counting on me to be there," she said. "When I got out of bed, Chuck looked and me and said that I had lost my mind."

Dills said she drove up Interstate-75, which was covered in snow and ice. Her car slid a few times, but she kept going.

"As I was driving I decided that I was crazy," she said.

But when she got to the meeting spot, there was the group, all of them, ready to run 10 miles.

"So we ran through Ft. Thomas in a foot of snow, which is one of the craziest things I've ever done," she said.

She's had her struggles with her decision to train for her first marathon. There's leaving her family behind on weekends, working her photography business around the training and family and then the sore feet, blisters, cramps and body aches. After she spends most of Saturday in training, she'll sit for several hours in an ice bath to relieve the pain.

She's learned to pack water, energy bars, salt tablets, pain reliever and even anti-diarrheal pills with her as she runs.

The running group also has a support system that sets up stations along the race route that offers water, sports drinks, cookies, music and encouragement.

"One guy has a table and puts a spread on of orange slices, chocolate chip cookies and stuff. It's like a buffet," she said.

So far, she's run 22 miles, the most she'll run before the actual race.

"When I finished that last mile, I felt great," she said.

She expects to complete the Flying Pig in five hours, but that's not what pushes her.

"I want to show my kids that anything is possible if you work for it," she said. "I feel like this generation doesn't have the work ethic, especially in an age of technology and instant gratification, so I want them to see that things aren't handed to you, you have to work for the things you want."

She plans to take some time off after the Flying Pig and possibly to train to run in the Walt Disney Marathon.

"But that will have to be a family decision because I now realize what a commitment this is," she said.

There are several other runners from Grant County who will be participating in the Flying Pig, including Dills and two others that attend church at Williamstown United Methodist Church.

She may not win the Flying Pig, but she's OK with that.

"My house might be a mess and my kids might be messy, but I'm happy," she said. "And it doesn't matter how long it takes me to cross that finish line, I'm going to finish and that's what is important."

HEALTHY

The Biggest Winner (BW) is the healthy competition organized by the local, non-profit organization, Fitness For Life Around Grant County (FFLAG,) to improve the health and health-awareness of Grant County's citizens.

The contest has been held during the month of April for the last eight years. Competitors attend numerous exercise classes from Arthritis Foundation Exercise to Zumba Fitness and healthy lifestyles classes from diabetes to vegetarianism. The goal is to have Grant Countians have healthier lifestyles and curb the current obesity crisis.

At Williamstown's annual Derby Day Festival, which will be May 4, FFLAG also hosts the annual Derby Dash 5K run/walk, which is in its ninth year.

"I think that Biggest Winner is a good thing, it's for a good organization and for $10, they give you a $15 T-shirt, they give you a bag, you go to the gym and work out for 30 days and it doesn't cost you nothing. I mean, for ten bucks, that's cheap. That's how I got started at the gym. Those people at that gym.

They're just a big family. They are so nice to you. They joke and cut up and kid with you," Spillman said.

When he joined BW, Spillman weighed 289 pounds.

"I lost 18 pounds and 12 percent body fat. So I thought I done pretty good. So I just kept staying on my diet and worked out," he said.

Walking through the cemetery, Spillman pauses at the gravesites of his mother and father. His parents rest, overlooking the next hill, where their farm was located. Most days, he will stop at the bench near their gravesites.

"Every time I walk out here I usually sit down there and meditate for 10 or 15 minutes, be with my mom and dad." I'm 71 years old, but I don't think you ever get over losing your family," he said.

Family is important to Spillman. He walks and talks with loving pride of his wife, children, grandchildren and friends, even noting his best friend who is buried along the trek in the grave yard.

"He died at 52 (of a heart attack). We was the same age," Spillman said.

His mom died at 62 and his dad died at 74 of cancer.

"So, I go get a colonoscopy every three or four years and get everything checked and thank the good lord I don't have any cancer yet."

But, sometimes he can overdo the workouts.

"Three weeks ago, that leg went out from under me, I walked on crutches for two days." That was when his trainer at the gym told him he was doing too much. He dropped his four-mile a day treadmill, going back to his regular six to eight mile walking days with weight training during the week.

His day begins with a walk to Williamstown School and back.

"Believe you me, that doggone hill there is steep!" As he walks, he uses his stick.

There's a story about the stick. It was given to him by Dr. Darl Shipp's father, John Shipp, because of his ability to drop tobacco sticks quickly.

"He (John) called me one day to come help cut tobacco. I was dropping sticks but Shipp could not keep up with me so he told me to take the stick because when I got his age, I was gonna need it," Spillman said.

He estimates the stick is at least 50 years old.

Unfortunately, while trying to develop a healthy lifestyle, he's had some brushes with rudeness. One girl, talking or texting on her cellphone while driving, ran him up the side of hill. Another day, a couple of boys threw pennies at him.

"I picked up 22 of them. I waved my stick and told them to come back because I wanted to give them their change, but they just kept going," he said.

It didn't stop his quest for better health and he continues the daily trek.

"A lot of days I make myself walk. You can ask Billie that works down to the gym, a lot of days I can't hardly walk when I get there, but I go ahead and do it. Cause Gary (Melton, his doctor) told me down there three years ago, 'in five years, Norma will be pushing you around in a wheel chair.' I told him no, not me. So I got two more years to prove him wrong. So I'm going to keep walking," he said.

And so he does, 56 pounds lighter, walking stick in hand; continuing on his journey to wellness.
